Shortly before Biden boarded Air Force One, a reporter asked if the U.S. and European allies had made a decision to approve Ukraine’s request for long-range weapons to attack targets inside Russia:

Mr. President, is there any chance that you would — on Ukraine — that you would change your mind on long-range weapons, allowing them to strike deeper into Russia, which is one of the main proposals that Zelenskyy put out?

Biden responded that no consensus had been reached:

In — in foreign policy, there’s never a, “Well, I never change my mind.” Right now, there is no consensus for long-range weapons (inaudible).
