After months of drama, the debt-ceiling deal is finally done — maybe. And few are happy about it. We take a look at what's in the deal, why many Republicans hate it, and its chances of getting signed into law.

Also, a recent news report reveals that taxpayer money has been funneled through a Department of Homeland Security “anti-terrorism” program to support an Antifa member who teaches leftists how to ultimately banish people with unacceptable views from online platforms, drive them out of physical public spaces, and even get them fired from work.

And for the second half of the program, Alex Newman discusses the latest World Health Organization plot for a massive power grab that threatens your country, liberty, family, and health; and The John Birch Society's legislative team discuss the latest legislative news.
