Having a Beef With UN Hypocrisy!

The global elites meeting in Dubai for the UN's COP28 climate conference want us to radically reduce our meat intake, ostensibly because eating meat is bad for the planet. Yet they themselves don't mind feasting on beef while telling the common folk to do as they say, not as they do.

Fox News published an online article today pointing out this hypocrisy. Under the headline "UN climate summit serving gourmet burgers, BBQ as it calls for Americans to stop eating meat," the article noted:

The ongoing United Nations COP28 climate summit in Dubai is offering a wide variety of gourmet food options from vendors who serve beef, even as it prepares a report that is expected to call for the West to reduce consumption of beef.

According to the summit's online portal, its food offerings include "juicy beef," "slabs of succulent meat," smoked wagyu burgers, Philly cheesesteaks and "melt-in-your-mouth BBQ" in addition to African street BBQ, fast casual Mexican fare and an Asian option that has a "touch of French flair." The revelation comes as the U.N. faces criticism for preparing a first-of-its-kind report that is expected to be published at the summit and call for lower meat consumption.

The New American has observed this and other hypocrisy first-hand, since we have a small team of journalists in Dubai covering COP28. In fact, so far as we know, we are the only accredited media there that is not friendly to the establishment party line that global warming constitutes an imminent and existential threat to the planet.

Our TNA Daily show today is comprised of interviews from our team reporting from Dubai on the happenings at COP28, including the radical agenda the global elites fully intend to impose on the rest of us in the name of saving the planet. To see today's show, click here.
