Javier Milei Will Keep Argentina in Paris Agreement

Javier Milei was sworn in as president of Argentina on Sunday in Buenos Aires. Milei, who described himself as a “anarcho-capitalist,” focused his presidential campaign on libertarian policy issues such as limited government and Austrian economics, and he said he believed climate change is a “socialist hoax.”

Since being sworn in, Milei has already backtracked and is reversing some of the policy positions that he built his winning presidential campaign on. Argentina’s top climate diplomat told Reuters on Sunday that Argentina would remain part of the Paris Agreement on climate change.
