More Transgender Violence: Confused Teen Kills Mother and Mother's Boyfriend

In another act of transgender violence, a Florida mother and her younger boyfriend were reportedly murdered by her transgender daughter in the early morning hours of July 7 in Palm Bay, Florida. Sixteen-year-old Julia Grace Egler reportedly confessed to committing the crime after staging a break-in to her home. She had first claimed a male assailant had broken a sliding glass door and shot 38-year-old Kelley McCollom, Egler's mother, and her 22-year-old boyfriend, Matthew Szejnrok.

The Crime

According to police reports, Egler cracked under interrogation and admitted to breaking in to her mother's room and taking a .38 caliber revolver and ammunition. When the mother and her boyfriend returned home, Egler greeted them with a chilling "Welcome home" before unloading the revolver into the couple.

Egler did not succeed in killing Szejnrok at first, and began to finish the job with a kitchen knife. She stabbed him repeatedly before finally reloading and shooting him in the head at the victim's request. The teen then called 911 and reported a break-in. Egler's break-in story quickly unraveled when police found bloody footprints matching Egler's shoes and other contradictory evidence.

Reportedly, Egler killed McCollom because she was unhappy that her mother was not more supportive of her gender transition. She was also upset that her mother was dating a 22-year-old. The teen is being held in a juvenile detention facility, and faces two charges of first-degree premeditated murder.

This is 16-year-old Julia Egler. She confessed to police that she killed her mother because her mother wasn't accepting of her transition.

You probably won't see this story on the MSM because it doesn't fit the narrative.

Transgender Trend

It's just the latest example of violence associated with transgenderism. Perhaps the most famous example of transgender violence is that of Audrey Hale, the 28-year-old "transgender" who shot up the Covenant School in Nashville, Tennessee in March 2023. Hale killed three children and three adults in her rampage. She wrote in her "manifesto," "I hope I have a high death count" and that she was "Ready to die. Ha Ha."

The attack by Hale inspired another transgendered individual, Jason Lee Willie, who also goes by the female pseudonym Alexia N. Willie, to plan a similar crime. Willie was arrested before he could complete his mission, but had threatened:

We're out here walking into your school, shooting your children, and I'm gonna tell you right now, I'm gonna be one of them and the FBI isn't gonna stop me, but I'm gonna kill your children out here.

And that's not all. Mia Bailey, a 28-year-old "transgender," is accused of killing his parents and firing at his brother and his wife in Washington City, Utah, in June. Maya McKinney, aka "Alec," and 18-year-old Devon Erickson shot up a STEM school in Colorado, killing one and injuring eight. Snochia Moseley, another transgendered person, killed three at a Maryland warehouse in 2018.

X user Benny Johnson noted the trend of transgender shooters in a March 2023 post:

The Colorado Springs shooter identified as non binary. The Denver shooter identified as trans. The Aberdeen shooter identified as trans. The Nashville shooter identified as trans. One thing is VERY clear: the modern trans movement is radicalizing activists into terrorists.

It isn't surprising that so many gender-confused individuals are connected with violence. Despite trans activists' fondest hopes, the entire transgender movement is closely associated with mental illnesses such as bipolar depression and schizophrenia. Shooting such people full of cross-gender hormones is just asking for trouble.
