New York Attorney General Letitia James rested her case against former President Donald Trump last week, closing after questioning Ivanka Trump. The former president and three of his children — Donald, Jr.; Eric; and Ivanka — were questioned by the state during the first six weeks of the trial. After the state rested its case, Trump defense lawyers attempted to end the trial by requesting a directed verdict, but Manhattan Supreme Court Judge Arthur Engoron stated the trial would continue as scheduled.
