Noting that their announcement was being released on World AIDS Day, the DOJ had notified Tennessee on December 1, 2023, that the law allegedly violated the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).

Assistant Attorney General Kristen Clarke stated in December’s press release, “Tennessee’s aggravated prostitution law is outdated, has no basis in science, discourages testing and further marginalizes people living with HIV..... People living with HIV should not be treated as violent sex offenders for the rest of their lives solely because of their HIV status. The Justice Department is committed to ensuring that people with disabilities are protected from discrimination.”
