

The World Must Go Vegan with the Help of AI: UN Climate Demonstrator

Starvation is one of the most painful ways to die, and the governments of the world can use “kind” artificial intelligence to create solutions to achieve mass veganism, argued Julian Bliss, an environmental protester and the founder of World Guardians.

“We can actually eliminate all the violence in the world, pretty much, if we start encouraging all the governments of the world to choose a thoughtful, compassionate AI,” Julian argued. He said the technology needs to not be “racist, sexist, [and] not denominational to make decisions.”

Bliss said to Americans that if Trump is smart, he will help move citizens away from eating steaks, and encourage plant-based meat consumption.
