

GI Pleads Guilty In Afghan Murders, Army Apologizes

The American GI accused of killing Afghan citizens in early 2010 has pleaded guilty to the charges, his defense attorney says. Spc. Jeremy Morlock of the U.S. Army copped to three counts of murder and other crimes for which the United States Government apologized early this week after Der Spiegel, the German news magazine, published photos of Morlock posing with dead bodies as if they were hunting trophies.

Morlock is accused of murdering three Afghan men in Afghanistan's Kandahar province in January, February and May 2010, and is one of five defendants in the case. Morlock is the first to step forward and admit guilt, The Associated Press reported.

According to a copy of the plea agreement, which was obtained by The Associated Press, Morlock has agreed to testify against his co-defendants. In his plea deal, Morlock said he and others slaughtered the three civilians knowing that they were unarmed and posed no legitimate threat.

He also described taking a lead role in the January incident — lobbing a grenade at the civilian while another soldier shot at him, and then lying about it to his squad leader.

Beastly Photos

Early this week, the U.S. Government was forced to apologize for the appalling photos that depicted Morlock and another GI posing with the dead bodies of the civilians they killed.

An Army spokesman said the photos are “repugnant to us as human beings and contrary to the standards and values of the United States Army. We apologize for the distress these photos cause.”

As well, the Army said, Morlock's actions should not reflect upon the Army.

“These court-martial proceedings speak for themselves. These photos appear in stark contrast to the discipline, professionalism and respect that have characterized our soldiers' performance during nearly 10 years of sustained operations.

Army officials were worried about the photos becoming public because of the controversy caused when the infamous photos of the torture occurring at Abu Ghraib military prison surfaced. Those photos depicted American GIs, men and women, torturing and humiliating Iraqi prisoners.

Der Spiegel said it published only three of 4,000 photos it received because it needed only to depict what Morlock and his accomplices had done for readers to understand what had happened. The photos have been a matter of speculation for some time, but a judge put them under protective order so they would not be released to the media.

Der Spiegel has not said how it obtained them.

Morlock and his men also collected body parts such as fingers from dead insurgents and civilians as

Written by R. Cort Kirkwood on March 23, 2011

trophies.

According to The Associated Press, “hashish smoking was rampant in the unit.” Morlock and his cohort also face a drug charges.

The Seattle Times reported that the plea deal will likely end in a prison term of 24 years and possible parole. He has agreed to testify against his former comrades.

Photo: Spc. Jeremy Morlock: AP Images

Subscribe to the New American

Get exclusive digital access to the most informative, non-partisan truthful news source for patriotic Americans!

Discover a refreshing blend of time-honored values, principles and insightful perspectives within the pages of "The New American" magazine. Delve into a world where tradition is the foundation, and exploration knows no bounds.

From politics and finance to foreign affairs, environment, culture, and technology, we bring you an unparalleled array of topics that matter most.

What's Included?

- 24 Issues Per Year
- Optional Print Edition
- Digital Edition Access
- Exclusive Subscriber Content
- Audio provided for all articles
- Unlimited access to past issues
- Coming Soon! Ad FREE
- 60-Day money back guarantee!
- Cancel anytime.

Subscribe