

Written by Raven Clabough on December 2, 2010

TSA Policies May Desensitize Children to Sexual Abuse

The concerns voiced against the intrusive Transportation Security Administration screening procedures have been confirmed by experts at Child Lures Prevention. According to the organization, in an effort to have children cooperate with the TSA screenings, the TSA is calling the airport pat-downs “a game.” As a result, children who experience the enhanced pat-downs may become desensitized to sexual molestation.

TSA regional security director James Marchand explained about the TSA’s interaction with children, “You try to make it as best you can for that child to come through. If you can come up with some kind of game to play with a child, it makes it a lot easier.”

Ken Wooden of Child Lures Prevention explains that telling children they are participating in a game “is one of the most common ways” for sexual predators to engage children in inappropriate contact. Likewise, because children “don’t have the sophistication” to differentiate between the pat-down at the airports and sexual assault, the TSA procedures are setting a dangerous precedent for children who undergo the procedures.

Reacting to the TSA’s reference to the screening procedures as a game, Wooden replied, “How can experts working at the TSA be so incredibly misinformed and misguided to suggest that full body pat downs for children be portrayed as a game. To do so is completely contrary to what we in the sexual abuse prevention field have been trying to accomplish for the past thirty years.”

He concludes, “TSA policy could desensitize children to inappropriate touch and ultimately make it easier for sexual offenders to prey on our children.”

Critics of the TSA screening methods were particularly angered by the use of enhanced pat-down procedures, which entail touching of the genitals, on children. In response to the outcry against the use of such procedures on children, the TSA announced its intent to modify the screening methods, but the L.A. Times revealed that it is “unclear” whether the new rules allow for the touching of children’s genitals.

In addition to the sensitive issue of screening children, TSA administrators have been forced to contend with the potential conflicts of screening victims of sexual abuse, who may be particularly offended by the enhanced pat-downs. John Pistole, TSA administrator, says that the TSA may change its screening rules for those particular fliers.

Overall, the TSA screening procedures have been under fire for their intrusive, invasive, sexual nature, and many assert that the measures would be a crime if conducted by anyone other than the federal government.

Written by Raven Clabough on December 2, 2010

Photo of a young girl waiting to undergo screening: AP Images

Related articles:

Report: Homeland Security Compiling TSA Enemies List

The Only Way: Abolish the TSA

TSA: Groping Grandmas but Giving Arms Traffickers, Terrorists & Drug Dealers a Pass

Janet Napolitano Considers Advanced Screenings for Mass Transit

Passenger's Firm Courtesy Thwarts TSA Screening

TSA "Freedom Grope" May Lead to Fatalities

Our Homeland Security and TSA Rulers Demand Gratitude for Groping Us

Getting Rich From the TSA Naked Body Scanners

Ron Paul on TSA Abuse: "Enough Is Enough"

Object to Sexual Assault? Boycott the Airlines!

Subscribe to the New American

Get exclusive digital access to the most informative, non-partisan truthful news source for patriotic Americans!

Discover a refreshing blend of time-honored values, principles and insightful perspectives within the pages of "The New American" magazine. Delve into a world where tradition is the foundation, and exploration knows no bounds.

From politics and finance to foreign affairs, environment, culture, and technology, we bring you an unparalleled array of topics that matter most.

Subscribe

What's Included?

- 24 Issues Per Year
- Optional Print Edition
- Digital Edition Access
- Exclusive Subscriber Content
- Audio provided for all articles
- Unlimited access to past issues
- Coming Soon! Ad FREE
- 60-Day money back guarantee!
- Cancel anytime.