Fashion CEO Owns Auction House That Peddles Pedo Mannequins

The Balenciaga fashion house was forced to apologize this week for ads that feature little girls with teddy bears dressed in sado-masochistic bondage attire. Worse than that, though, the top member of the haute couture is linked to an auction house that peddles “art” for pedophiles.

The latest scandal involves the chief executive officer of Balenciaga’s parent company, François-Henri Pinault. He owns Christie’s, which peddles mannequins of kids with genitalia on their faces.

The disturbing images are more proof that pedophiles have penetrated the top echelons of the Ruling Class, whose members run not only the fashion industry, but also entertainment and the leftist mainstream media.

Child Porn Sympathizers

The trouble began for Balenciaga, founded in 1919, with its ad campaign featuring little girls with BDSM (bondage and discipline, domination and submission, sadism and masochism) bears. Another ad features a copy of the U.S. Supreme Court’s decision in United States v. Williams. In a 7-2 decision written by the late Associate Justice Antonin Scalia, the court ruled that peddling child porn is not protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The besieged fashion house apologized for both.

“Our plush bear bags should not have been featured with children in this campaign. We have immediately removed the campaign from all platforms,” the company said:

Hours after issuing the apology, Balenciaga posted a further statement on Instagram apologizing for displaying “unsettling documents” in a separate campaign, referring to documents from a Supreme Court case relating to child pornography laws.

“We apologize for displaying unsettling documents in our campaign. We take this matter very seriously and are taking legal action against the parties responsible for creating the set and including unapproved items for our Spring 23 campaign photoshoot,” the company said. “We strongly condemn abuse of children in any form. We stand for children’s safety and well-being.”

Why the company sells any product that promotes BDSM is a good question, as is what type of nutcase would buy it.

Perverted Dolls for Pedos

That aside, Evie magazine reported another outrage.

“Balenciaga is associated with various people who seem to have an obsession with art that depicts pedophilia and even cannibalism,” the women’s fashion website reported:

Balenciaga stylist Lotta Volkova has posted many photos on her Instagram of children in distressing, sexual, or even violent situations and she’s close friends with Balenciaga creative director Demna Gvasalia, who once told Vice that he and Lotta “grew up on child pornography.”

That explains the deviant ad campaign, and also provides insight into a third scandal involving Balenciaga’s parent, Kering, which owns Gucci, Saint Laurent, and other fashion houses.

“Kering’s CEO is billionaire François-Henri Pinault, who owns the famous Christie’s auction house,” Evie continued. The Christie’s website features “child sex mannequins that are extremely disturbing.” In fact, the mannequins are child porn for pedos. The artists are Jake and Dinos Chapman.

It’s a male toddler with an erect penis in place of his nose and an anus in place of his mouth. The piece of art shows the boy walking with a large brown t-shirt on and purple sneakers.

Another piece of art with the same title F*ck Face shows an adolescent girl standing completely naked with the same genitalia in place of her nose and mouth. She’s wearing nothing but a pair of black sneakers.

Another item titled “Zygotic” shows five naked girls who are minors if not under 13 years old.

There’s much, much more, including “other pieces of art by the Chapman brothers that show severed body parts, blood, and gore.”

Pedos Normalized

Yet the larger story is the push to normalize adult-child sex. Pedos, their apologists claim, are completely normal. They shouldn’t be ostracized for the way they “feel,” as long as they don’t act on those feelings.

Thus, highly paid freaks and weirdos are pushing the term “Minor Attracted Person,” or “MAP,” to describe the perverted desire to have sex with kids.

In August, Libs of TikTok exposed a “licensed professional counselor and sex therapist,” Miranda Galbreath, who works for the Pennsylvania Department of Correction. She thinks “MAPS” are “probably the most vilified population of folks in our culture.” As well, “most folks are making incorrect assumptions about them without actually knowing much about them. And those assumptions create harm for an already marginalized population.”

Thus, she uses “MAP” to describe the perverts. Said Galbreath:

Pedophile has moved from being a diagnostic label to being a judgmental, hurtful insult that we hurl at people in order to harm them.

“First of all, because I think it’s important to use terminology for groups that members of that group want others to use for them,” avers “Queer Criminologist” Allyn Walker. “MAP” is “less stigmatizing than other terms like pedophile,” and so using “pedophile” to describe pedos must be stopped.

Stigmatizing pedos makes them “think that they’re monsters,” he says. “That’s really problematic.”

One of the pro-pedo propagandists, Noah Berlatsky, writes for NBC’s website. He says “pedophiles are essentially a stigmatized group.”
