Is Christianity the enemy of science? Doesn't the controversy between Galileo and the Catholic Church prove this? Many believe this, because this is what they have been taught. But as Steve Byas explains in this "Beyond the Cover" interview, the truth is very different. Steve is a university history and government instructor who is very familiar with the Galileo case, and who, like both Galileo and the church, believes in both scientific inquiry and in faith. Steve's feature article "The Galileo Case Revisited" appears in the February 27 issue of The New American.
