Alongside Common Core, Feds Will Vacuum Up Data on Kids

Veteran educator Mary Black explains how, contrary to establishment claims, Common Core and the federal government's broader education "reform" agenda will indeed vacuum up huge amounts of information on American children for data-mining and other purposes.

The video player thumbnail features a blue header with the title "Alongside Common Core, Feds Will Vacuum Up Data on Kids" and a sub-header "Data Mining". Below the header is a central image of the Utah Data Center, a large industrial-style building complex with a play button overlay. To the right of the image is a list of bullet points: "Each state is required to have a database" and "400 points of information can be collected on children". The bottom of the player has a red banner with the "New American" logo repeated.
