

Written by Warren Mass on November 18, 2019

U.S. and South Korea Downsize Joint Training Event to Show “Good Faith” to North

Secretary of Defense Mark Esper said on November 17 that the United States and South Korea have indefinitely postponed a joint military exercise in an “act of goodwill” toward North Korea. Esper made the announcement during a joint news conference in Bangkok with Jeong Kyeong-doo, South Korea’s minister of national defense.

Esper said the postponement was not a concession to Pyongyang, but instead “a good-faith effort by the United States and the Republic of Korea to enable peace, to shape ... to facilitate a political agreement — a deal, if you will — that leads to the denuclearization of the Korean peninsula,” reported the AP.

The defense secretary also reportedly stated that both the United States and South Korea urged Pyongyang to “demonstrate the same goodwill” and resume denuclearization talks “without precondition or hesitation.”

Esper added that the United States and South Korean militaries “will remain at a high state of readiness.” A November 18 Defense Department news release also stated that while at the Bangkok conference, “Esper reiterated the U.S. commitment to achieve the final, fully verified denuclearization of North Korea and complete abandonment of all weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles.”

When Esper made the announcement on Sunday, it was already dated news since a November 6 article in Air Force Magazine, citing a statement Korean officials told the government-funded Yonhap News Agency that the United States and South Korea will once again hold a scaled-down flying training event instead of the large-scale Vigilant Ace exercise. The report quoted Pentagon spokesman Lieutenant Colonel Dave Eastburn, who told the agency there will be an upcoming “Combined Flying Training Event.”

It is the second consecutive year that Vigilant Ace has been suspended. The exercise, first launched in 2015, regularly included hundreds of aircraft from both the U.S. Air Force and Republic of Korea Air Force, along with aircraft from the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps. Last year’s exercise was suspended following President Trump’s summit with North Korea’s Supreme Leader Kim Jong-un.

Air Force Magazine reported in October 2018 that former Defense Secretary Jim Mattis and Jeong Kyeong-doo announced that decision during a meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in Singapore. The explanation was that it was an effort to let the diplomatic process continue, with the end goal of denuclearization on the peninsula.

Written by Warren Mass on November 18, 2019

“Both ministers are committed to modifying training exercises to ensure the readiness of our forces,” Pentagon spokeswoman Dana White said in a statement at the time. “They pledged to maintain close coordination and evaluate future exercises.”

Photo: U.S. Air Force

Related articles:

Joint U.S.-South Korean Military Exercises to Go On After Olympics

North Korea Attacks U.S.-South Korean Military Exercises and Makes Wild Threats

North Korea: Globalist Pawn?

North Korea Threatens “Merciless” Strikes Against U.S.-South Korean Forces

U.S. 7th Fleet Conducting Joint Exercises With Japan, South Korea

U.S.-South Korea Military Exercise Riles North

China Says It Will Remain Neutral if U.S. Retaliates Against North Korean First Strike

What Does the U.S.-North Korean War of Words Really Mean?

Warren Mass has served The New American since its launch in 1985 in several capacities, including marketing, editing, and writing. Since retiring from the staff several years ago, he has been a regular contributor to the magazine. Warren writes from Texas and can be reached at wmass@thenewamerican.com.

Subscribe to the New American

Get exclusive digital access to the most informative, non-partisan truthful news source for patriotic Americans!

Discover a refreshing blend of time-honored values, principles and insightful perspectives within the pages of "The New American" magazine. Delve into a world where tradition is the foundation, and exploration knows no bounds.

From politics and finance to foreign affairs, environment, culture, and technology, we bring you an unparalleled array of topics that matter most.

What's Included?

- 24 Issues Per Year
- Optional Print Edition
- Digital Edition Access
- Exclusive Subscriber Content
- Audio provided for all articles
- Unlimited access to past issues
- Coming Soon! Ad FREE
- 60-Day money back guarantee!
- Cancel anytime.

Subscribe