

Written by Veronika Kyrylenko on August 1, 2024

Texas Wins Appeal to Keep Floating Barrier on Rio Grande

Texas has secured a major legal victory in its ongoing battle with the Biden administration over immigration enforcement along the United States-Mexico border. A U.S. appeals court ruled on Tuesday that the state can maintain a 1,000-foot long floating barrier on the Rio Grande, rejecting the Biden administration's efforts to remove the structure.

As reported by The Texas Tribune, "the text of the decision was released by the court Tuesday evening, but then appeared to have been taken down shortly after." They added that the lawsuit is set to be heard in district court soon, where a decision will be made regarding the merits of the Biden administration's claims.

AP Images

Texas Governor Greg Abbott lauded the court's ruling, stating,

The Fifth Circuit last night delivered a victory for Texas' historic border security mission by ruling that our floating marine barriers can stay in the Rio Grande River. Last year, Texas installed these barriers to deny dangerous and illegal river crossings, and almost immediately, the Biden-Harris Administration sued to remove them and obstruct our efforts to secure our border. We fought to keep these barriers in the water, and with the Fifth Circuit's decision, that is exactly where they will remain. This fight is far from over. Texas will continue to defend our constitutional right to secure our southern border to keep our state and the nation safe.

Last night, the 5th Circuit ruled that Texas can keep our buoys in the Rio Grande.

The Biden-Harris Admin sued to remove them & obstruct our efforts to secure the border.

Instead, Texas WON.

We will never back down in our fight to secure our border. pic.twitter.com/LLn02B6lQk

— Greg Abbott (@GregAbbott_TX) July 31, 2024

Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton vowed to "continue to defend Texas's right to protect its border from illegal immigration."

☐BREAKING: The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled in Texas's favor, finding that the

Written by Veronika Kyrylenko on August 1, 2024

---

federal district court abused its discretion when it ordered Texas to remove the buoys floating in the Rio Grande that prevent aliens from attempting a dangerous river crossing to enter...

— Attorney General Ken Paxton (@KenPaxtonTX) July 31, 2024

DOJ Complaint

In July 2023, Texas installed a floating barrier of wrecking ball-sized buoys in a shallow section of the Rio Grande as part of Governor Abbott's Operation Lone Star, a program aimed at deterring migrants from crossing the U.S.-Mexico border that was launched in March 2021. The Biden administration swiftly responded by filing a lawsuit against Texas on July 24, 2023, arguing that the state had acted unlawfully by installing the barrier without securing the necessary federal approvals, including from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The Department of Justice (DOJ), representing the Biden administration, claimed the barrier was posing "serious risks to public safety and the environment, and may interfere with the federal government's ability to carry out its official duties."

House Democrats and other critics of Abbott, who urged Biden to stop Texas from protecting its borders, lamented that the buoys were "putting asylum-seekers at serious risk of injury and death, interfering with federal immigration enforcement, infringing on private property rights, and violating U.S. treaty commitments with Mexico."

Abbott's Defense

Abbott defended the measure as a necessary response to the border crisis caused by the Biden administration's open-border policies.

"It has been under your watch that migrants have suffered an unprecedented crisis of inhumanity," Abbott wrote in a letter to Joe Biden in response to the lawsuit. "If you truly care about human life, you must begin enforcing federal immigration laws."

The governor added that, when ordering the deployment of the barrier, he acted as "commander-in-chief of our State's militia." He said the barrier was intended to guide migrants toward legal entry points while discouraging illegal crossings and drug trafficking.

According to the Tribune, the state's attorneys argued in court that the barrier is not a structure requiring federal authorization. They also maintained that Texas had followed proper protocol by briefing the international commission that oversees the Rio Grande prior to the barrier's installation.

In April 2024, U.S. District Judge David Ezra issued a preliminary injunction requiring Texas to relocate the barrier. This is the ruling overturned by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, allowing Texas to maintain the barrier while the legal proceedings continue.

How the Buoys Work

The floating barrier consists of large, heavy buoys tethered together and anchored in the riverbed. The design is intended to make it difficult for individuals to swim across the river at this location. The buoys are positioned in a way that makes them nearly impossible to climb over, acting as a physical deterrent to migrants attempting to cross the river illegally.

One year ago, Texas installed marine barriers in the Rio Grande.

Written by Veronika Kyrylenko on August 1, 2024

---

The Biden-Harris Administration SUEDE Texas for stepping up to protect our state and our nation.

Americans deserve law and order at the border, so the buoys remain in the water today.
pic.twitter.com/IQuRtQ1BvA

— Greg Abbott (@GregAbbott_TX) July 27, 2024

Texas installed the buoys near Eagle Pass, Texas, a location known for frequent illegal border crossings, and across from Piedras Negras, Mexico.

Enforcement at Work

Governor Abbott told Fox News in April that the number of migrants trying to enter the country through the Rio Grande into Eagle Pass had notably declined, quoting how the numbers had gone from thousands to just a few a day thanks to Operation Lone Star.

He also pointed out that while Texas has more than two-thirds of the U.S.-Mexico border, it had recently seen fewer illegal crossings than other border states.

Legal and Political Implications

The 5th Circuit's ruling is a setback for the Biden administration and a victory for Texas officials, who have been at the forefront of legal battles with the federal government over immigration policies.

However, the legal fight is far from over. The administration's lawsuit against Texas is still ongoing, with a trial scheduled to begin next week. The outcome of this case could have significant implications for the balance of power between state and federal governments in setting and enforcing immigration policy.

The administration has also been involved in legal disputes with other Republican-led states, including Iowa and Oklahoma, over their efforts to enforce state-level immigration laws that the administration argues are in conflict with federal authority.

Politically, this development poses further challenges for Vice President Kamala Harris, the presumed Democratic nominee for the presidency, who has been serving as the administration's "border czar" since March 2021. This situation may intensify scrutiny of her role and effectiveness in addressing border-related issues that are of high importance for American voters.

Subscribe to the New American

Get exclusive digital access to the most informative, non-partisan truthful news source for patriotic Americans!

Discover a refreshing blend of time-honored values, principles and insightful perspectives within the pages of "The New American" magazine. Delve into a world where tradition is the foundation, and exploration knows no bounds.

From politics and finance to foreign affairs, environment, culture, and technology, we bring you an unparalleled array of topics that matter most.

What's Included?

- 24 Issues Per Year
- Optional Print Edition
- Digital Edition Access
- Exclusive Subscriber Content
- Audio provided for all articles
- Unlimited access to past issues
- Coming Soon! Ad FREE
- 60-Day money back guarantee!
- Cancel anytime.

Subscribe