

“Coups” Against Trump Failed, But Danger Remains: Roger Stone

Based on his insights into American politics and especially the assassination of John F. Kennedy and the attempted murder of Ronald Reagan, legendary political operative Roger Stone knew less than one year into Trump’s presidency that he would be targeted, too.

In this explosive interview with The New American magazine Senior Editor Alex Newman for Conversations That Matter, Stone revisits those predictions he made in a late 2017 interview with Newman and goes deeper.

He also said Congress, not the disgraced FBI and politicized Department of Justice, must lead the investigation into the attempted assassination of Trump. The House has all the powers it needs to do a full and thorough investigation, although getting to the bottom of this will be very difficult.

The establishment is especially “apoplectic” against Trump right now with the view that rule of law may be returning soon, potentially putting evildoers in jeopardy. That means the danger facing Trump remains.

Stone also shares his view on the chaos taking place in the Democrat Party amid Biden’s reported standdown from the 2024 presidential race.
