Reviewing Trump's Cabinet: Deep State Penetration?

The Deep State is trying to subvert the second administration of President-elect Trump by attacking many good appointees with drummed-up allegations and smear campaigns, explained The New American's Alex Newman in Behind the Deep State. However, there are some bad apples in the bunch.

Newman exposes a few of Trump's bad picks, including Hillsborough County, FL, Sheriff Chad Chronister, appointed for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, who went after pastors that kept their churches open during COVID and supported Barack Obama and the LGBTQ movement. Thankfully, after receiving pressure from MAGA supporters, Chronister resigned the nomination.

Ultimately, there are many appointments that will positively fight against the Deep State, argued Newman, who shared clips of interviews he conducted with appointees such as Vivek Ramaswamy, Robert F. Kennedy Jr., Tom Homan, Kash Patel, Peter Navarro, and more. The American people must continue to keep a close eye on the cabinet nomination process and make sure that legitimate concerns are raised.
