In this interview with The New American, Hogan Gidley discusses the improvement of the electoral system put in place since 2020 in relation to mail-in ballots and voting machines and outlines the existing challenges, such as cyberthreats posed by China, Russia, and Iran.

Hogan Gidley is the America First Policy Institute's Vice Chair of the Center for Election Integrity and Senior Advisor for Communications. Most recently, he served as National Press Secretary for President Trump's Re-Election Campaign, Principal Deputy Press Secretary, and Deputy Assistant to the President in the Trump Administration.

The New American magazine is covering CPAC and the International Crisis Summit in Washington, D.C. on February 21-24. For more content, please visit:
