Howard Vlieger calls himself a “student of the soil,” and he is a third-generation farmer in northwest Iowa. A crop and livestock nutrition adviser, Vlieger works with top scientists and researchers around the world on GMO and chemical issues. His specialty is regenerative farming, and he is an expert on glyphosate. As precinct chair for his district in the Iowa Republican Party, he is trying to expose the dangers of Big Tech and Big Brother.

He joins The New American senior editor Rebecca Terrell to discuss these issues as well as legislation before both chambers of the Iowa legislature, proposing immunity to Big Ag chemical companies from any liability should their chemicals in our food system be proven to cause health problems.
