The Arizona Supreme Court just sent back an election-fraud case filed by 2022 gubernatorial candidate Kari Lake to a lower court, legitimizing her claim; the former stepson of the leftist candidate in the Wisconsin Supreme Court race says Janet Protasiewicz used the “n-word” repeatedly; and China’s organ-harvesting practice has brought about a rare moment of unity in Congress.

Also, The New American’s Senior Editor Rebecca Terrell interviews an advocate for patients endangered by lethal hospital Covid protocols, whose life mission was triggered after he lost his young daughter to what he considers intentionally deadly hospital protocols.
