In this edition of Conversations That Matter with The New American's Alex Newman, Linda Goudsmit, author of multiple children's books on critical thinking and "reality-testing"; multiple books on education philosophy; and the upcoming book Space Is No Longer the Final Frontier, Reality Is; confirms how education in America is being weaponized to create generations of people unable to distinguish between objective reality (what really is) and subjective reality (feelings). She emphasizes that, in order to have a truly free society and constitutional republic, it is critically necessary to agree on what is objectively real.
