Dad Attacked After Speaking Against Hateful Schools Chief

After learning that his school board chief publicly celebrated the death of a Christian conservative figure as “one less MAGA,” concerned father and small businessman Jeremy Clepper spoke out at the Alachua County School Board meeting to make his views known. Board members responded by asking law enforcement to remove him from the meeting. Now, consequences are growing.

In an exclusive interview with The New American magazine’s Alex Newman on Conversations That Matter, Clepper explains why he felt the need to speak out. He also explained that parents can no longer trust the school system. However, as state and federal authorities look into the abusive behavior of district officials, the days of trampling on the rights of parents and taxpayers may be coming to an end.
