Florida lawmakers are failing to pass a simple bill protecting children from filth despite a super majority as the state's government schools fail to educate, warned Florida Citizens Alliance chief Keith Flaugh in this interview on Conversations That Matter with The New American magazine's Alex Newman. The state is also deceiving parents and the world with phony grades to conceal the massive dumbing down, continued Flaugh, whose organization counts nearly 300,000 members. As such, it is time for parents to get children out of government schools, and his organization can help. Flaugh also mentions a major bill to create transactional gold that may pass this session.
