With two weeks to go until the 2024 presidential election, a judge just stripped former Trump lawyer and New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani of most of his assets. The official reason is because he defamed two Georgia election poll workers and his things will be used to satisfy the judgment. But is the real goal here to send a message to anyone who would dare question election results?

Also in this episode:

It turns out Nathan Wade, the illicit lover of Fanni Willis, met with the White House twice, according to a congressional report;

U.S. Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin says there are North Korean troops in Russia;

Another migrant caravan is heading to the southern border. Some suspect they're trying to get in before a Trump victory.
