Belem, Brazil — Senior Editor Alex Newman and correspondent Andrew Muller are on the scene in Brazil, covering the UN's COP30* Climate Summit for The New American. President Trump has labeled global warming alarmism a giant “con job” and has refused to dignify the conference with an official delegation. Without the world's biggest economy and with science daily debunking the ludicrous fright peddling claims of the climate “science” lobby, the summit is unlikely to galvanize any global “consensus” on climate matters. However, that is not stopping the politicians and UN bureaucrats at the conference, who are trying desperately to continue their totalitarian globalist agenda. “They are doubling down and tripling down” on schemes to make carbon fuels prohibitively expensive, drastically limit our travel options, and make us all poorer and less free, Alex Newman explains, pointing to California Governor Gavin Newsom, who was the main U.S. celebrity politician at the conference.

Andrew Muller followed up on his article (At COP30, Countries Sign First-ever Declaration to Control Info on Climate) exposing the UN's ongoing agenda to impose complete internet censorship to prevent “misinformation” and “disinformation” from climate “denialists.” Which is another way of saying the globalists are demanding total thought control over the means of communication to stamp out all “thoughtcrime.”
